Editor's Note

This issue of the Journal of Civil Rights and Social Justice is dedicated to a symposium titled, "The 50th Anniversary of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 & Voting Rights Act of 1965: An Interdisciplinary Dialogue." The symposium, held in 2015, was sponsored by The Roger Mudd Center for Ethics and the Frances Lewis Law Center.

The symposium papers explore issues related to passive and active racism in race-related education cases as well as explore debates on slavery and empire amongst students at our very own Washington & Lee University in the 1850s, back when it was called Washington College.

This issue also includes two student notes written by members of the 2015–2016 Editorial Board. These notes reflect how civil rights and social justice issues infiltrate a range of legal disciplines. The notes focus on topics such as whether League of Legends eSports players are employees and how best to ensure players' rights are protected, as well as topics related to Title VII status-based discrimination versus retaliation claims.

This publication would not be possible without the help and tireless efforts of a great team. I would like to thank the Editorial Board and Lisa Gearheart for their hard work and dedication. Additionally, the Journal is grateful for the support of Professor Margaret Hu and Professor Victoria Sahani.

WASHINGTON AND LEE
JOURNAL OF CIVIL RIGHTS AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

Mission Statement: The Washington and Lee Journal of Civil Rights and Social Justice (JCRSJ) is a biannual scholarly publication focusing on legal issues that affect historically under represented classes of persons. The Journal has published articles covering a wide variety of subject matter including real estate, education, healthcare, family, environment, public welfare, and international rights. The Journal's mission is to explore the intersection of majority and minority culture through discrete legal issues. To that end, the Journal seeks to provide a space for scholars of all persuasions to expand and develop a theoretical, critical, and socially relevant dialogue with the legal community. The articles published by the Journal are building blocks for understanding the issues that face our society today.

Statement of Ownership and Management: The Washington and Lee Journal of Civil Rights and Social Justice (ISSN 1942-5732) is owned by Washington and Lee University and is published twice a year by students of Washington and Lee University School of Law. The Journal is printed at Joe Christensen, Inc., 1540 Adams Street, Lincoln, Nebraska 68521 and is entered as a periodical with postage paid at post offices in Lexington, Virginia, and Lincoln, Nebraska. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to Washington and Lee Journal of Civil Rights and Social Justice, Washington and Lee School of Law, Lexington, Virginia 24450. Chelsea Creta is the Editor in Chief for the 2016–2017 issues. The Journal may be contacted by phone at (540) 458–8119, or by e-mail at jcrsj@law.wlu.edu.
