PERSONAL

Dear Sandra and John,

We look forward each year to your Christmas greetings, that include a picture of you with your three sons and four grandchildren.

I agree with the view now frequently expressed that Sandra sits at the "center" of the Supreme Court, and is the Court's most influential member. I watch the decisions of the Court, and I usually would agree with Sandra's.

With affection,

Justice O'Connor and Mr. O'Connor

PERSONAL

Dear Sandra,

You are a dear and thoughtful friend. Jo and I are happy to have the photograph that was taken January 20 when we - the Justices of the Court - were waiting in the old "Supreme Court" before going out to the inauguration of our new President.

He already seems to be in considerable trouble on the issue of "gays" in the armed services. As I was in the Army Air Force, and abroad for 32 months, I have little sympathy for Clinton who never wore a uniform.

I will be in Richmond next week sitting on the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. I hope we can have lunch together at a convenient time for you when I return.

My best to you and John.

As ever,

Justice O'Connor

MEMORANDUM TO THE CONFERENCE

I have just now written the President that I am retiring, effective on the day the Court rises for its next summer recess. And Toni House has the news also.

It's been a great ride, full of interest and excitement; but Marion and I think it's time to turn my seat over to someone else. I have greatly admired and enjoyed each of the 20 Justices with whom I have served.

And what could be a better birthday present for Nino than a new colleague? Can you imagine the Governor answering the door?

Cheers,

March 19, 1993

Justice White announced today that he will retire as an active Justice at the end of the Term. He will have been on the Court 31 years. He is one of the most remarkable people I have ever known: an All-America football player, a Rhodes Scholar, and in World War II he was a decorated officer in the United States Navy. He has been an influential Justice on this Court. He will be missed.

Justice White is also my friend.

Lewis F. Powell, Jr.

March 23, 1993

Dear Byron:

Your memorandum of March 19 was delivered to me this morning. I am still in a state of shock, as the Court will miss your experience and wisdom. You will be recognized as one of the truly great Justices of this Court.

I well recall that when I was a "rookie" Justice I always felt free to visit your Chambers when I needed advice.

Jo and I hope that you and Marion will continue to keep your primary home here in Washington. We send affectionate best wishes to both of you.

Gentlemen:

It is with genuine regret that I will not be able to attend the reception in honor of Justice Marshall on May 3. I had not been advised that the biography of Justice Marshall has been released. I will certainly want a copy.

I sat beside Justice Marshall during the 15 years I served as a Justice. He will go down in history as one of our greatest lawyers. In my view he did more than any other person to bring an end to segregation in our country.

Dear Clarence,

I was distressed to learn that you suffered a torn Achilles' tendon. You have my sympathy. A few years ago I had a broken hip when I fainted rather suddenly. I became fairly skillful on crutches - but very careful.

I enclose a copy of the Newsweek article of April 19 by George Will which is very favorable to you. Will is a gifted writer who would have been a leading member of the bar.

If I can assist you in any way feel free to call on me.

Anita Hill's Tangled Web

To believe that Hill told the truth you must believe that dozens of people lied

One of them lied. Anita Hill's charges were as detailed as Clarence Thomas's denials were categorical. Now comes a book, "The Real Anita Hill" by David Brock, that dismantles the myth that Hill is a conservative Republican who was driven from Washington by sexual harassment. Brock assembles an avalanche of evidence that Hill lied—about her career and her relations with Thomas.

What a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive. Hill, who wanted to make her harassment charges against Thomas anonymously, and then confidentially, was pulled into the public arena when her written statement to the Senate was leaked by her anti-Thomas allies. But her misadventure began weeks earlier, when her friend Susan Hoerchner told Senate staffers that while living in Washington in the spring of 1981 she had been told in a telephone conversation with Hill that Hill was being sexually harassed at work by Thomas. But that was six months before Hill went to work for Thomas and 10 months before the alleged harassment began—at which point Hoerchner was living in California. When, during an interview with Senate staff, Hoerchner realized her contradiction, she quickly huddled with a lawyer representing Hill, then changed her story: she could not remember when or where she had the telephone conversation.

In the spring of 1981 Hill was working, and failing, at a Washington law firm. Asked about her departure from the firm, she testified under oath: "It was never suggested to me that I should leave the law firm in any way." A senior member of the firm swore in an affidavit that Hill was told that the low caliber of her work made it "in her best interests" to seek employment elsewhere. (Judiciary Committee Democrats blocked a Republican request to settle the conflict by subpoenaing the firm's records.) Thomas hired Hill at the Education Department, where several people remember her claiming to have been harassed at the law firm. Could those claims have been made to mask her professional failure?

Two people purported to corroborate Hill's claim to have been harassed by her "supervisor" after she followed Thomas to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in 1982. But they did not testify that she had named Thomas. And "supervisor" would have been an odd way for an assistant to refer to the chairman of a federal agency. One of her several supervisors at the EEOC had a reputation as a harasser.

Thomas's personal reputation was impeccable until autumn 1991, when Hill made her embroidered charges. (She swore that her testimony contained more lurid details than her FBI interview because the two agents had not asked for all details. Both agents disputed her.) By 1991 Thomas had been the subject of five FBI checks and the hostile scrutiny of four Senate confirmations. No one other than Hill has challenged Thomas's testimony concerning his comportment toward her. No one could be found to testify to ever having seen her exhibit the demeanor of a harassment victim. No one who had worked with the two of them on a daily basis testified to believing her.

Most harassers have a pattern of harassment. (So far 23 women have accused Senator Packwood.) Not one of the scores of women Thomas has worked with supported Hill's portrayal of Thomas. Most harassment victims avoid their harassers. Hill testified that she only once drove home with Thomas, who lived nearby. But a co-worker testified that Hill told him she did so several times and hoped for a more personal relationship with Thomas. Hill said she followed Thomas when he moved from Education to the EEOC because she thought that was necessary to stay employed. But she, a Yale Law graduate, had signed a document asserting that she had "career tenure." And a co-worker testified to telling Hill that she could keep her job at Education. Hill swore that she did not know who would be replacing Thomas. Thomas's replacement swore that she knew and that he offered her the same job she had under Thomas.

Telephone logs show that after she moved to Oklahoma she called Thomas many times. First she said the logs were "garbage." Then she said she was only returning calls from him. Then she conceded initiating some. She said one was "following up" another professor's letter inviting Thomas to lecture. But that "follow up" call was made three months before the letter was sent. She testified that a law dean asked her to drive Thomas to the Tulsa airport. The dean said Hill called the night before to ask if she could drive Thomas so she could show him her new car.

Campus leftism: At the EEOC she irritated co-workers by trying to assert a special relationship with Thomas. Brock presents much evidence that she left the EEOC, and Washington, bitter with Thomas because of increasing hostility to his conservatism and because she was not given an appointment for which Thomas did not consider her competent. At the University of Oklahoma, Brock reports, she has been prominent in the shrill but conventional campus leftism of racial and sexual politics. Reporters rummaged in Thomas's garbage in search of damaging information; scrutiny of Hill was and has been less searching. The New York Times reported that even "her closest friends" know little of her political views. The Washington Post reported those views to be essentially like Thomas's. Accurate reports of her political and personal conflicts with Thomas would have suggested a motive for mendacity.

To believe that Hill told the truth you must believe that dozens of people, with no common or even apparent motive to lie, did so. Brock's book will be persuasive to minds not sealed by the caulking of ideology. If Hill is a "victim," it is not of sexual harassment or (in language she has used from a lecture podium) "the powerlessness of women" in "our misogynist society." Rather, she may be a victim of the system of racial preferences that put her on a track too fast for her abilities, that taught her to think of herself as a victim and made her fluent in the rhetoric of victimization.

Thomas's ordeal was a manifestation of the politics of character assassination, whereby political differences become occasions for moral assault. It worked against Bork. It almost worked against Thomas. Perhaps the unmasking of Hill will give the practitioners of such politics pause.

Dear Justice Powell:

Once again, we thank you for your graciousness in 1990 in honoring the American Inns of Court and the legal profession by permitting your name to be used for the Lewis F. Powell, Jr. Award for Professionalism and Ethics, awarded annually by the American Inns of Court at their National Annual Meeting. We were also honored by your acceptance of the first award. Justice William Brennan presented you with the award in a special ceremony in June of 1990 at the American Inns of Court Annual Meeting.

This year, the American Inns of Court is honored again to present the award to Justice William J. Brennan, Jr. The presentation will be at our Ninth Annual Meeting, June 10 - 13, in Chicago.

Would you consider making a one or two sentence inspirational quote about Justice Brennan, his contribution to the bench and his dedication to the principles of ethics and professionalism? We would like to include your statement in our press release announcing the award.

You may FAX your statement to our office at (703) 684-3607, or have your secretary call Brad Caswell at (703) 684-3590 with your statement. If you would like to participate, we will need your statement by noon on Thursday, May 13. Please call me at (202) 662-9069 as well if you have any questions.

I am aware that a member of my staff contacted you on Friday, May 7 and spoke to you regarding this matter. My staff member told me of your reservations. I would just like to extend my personal invitation. It would not only mean a lot to the American Inns of Court - I am sure it would mean a great deal to Justice Brennan.

I have attached a draft copy of the press release to give you an idea of what we are looking for. As you will see, I have made a statement on Justice Brennan's behalf. We would be honored to add your statement to this press release.

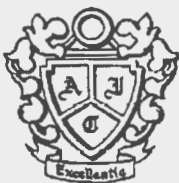

Justice Powell, thank you for your time and consideration of this matter. I hope to hear from you soon.

Warmest regards,

JUSTICE WILLIAM J. BRENNAN, JR. TO RECEIVE
THE AMERICAN INNS OF COURT LEWIS F. POWELL, JR. AWARD

May 12, 1993 -- Today, the American Inns of Court Foundation announced it will confer the Lewis F. Powell, Jr. Award for Professionalism and Ethics upon Justice William J. Brennan, Jr., retired Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. The Award Ceremony will take place on June 11, 1993 at the Ninth Annual Meeting of the American Inns of Court in Chicago, Illinois.

The Lewis F. Powell, Jr. Award for Professionalism and Ethics is given each year to an individual who has rendered exemplary services to the legal profession in the areas of legal excellence, professionalism and ethics. The award is an opportunity for the American Inns of Court to reach out to persons who share the movement's vision and dedication to these principles. The first award was given in 1990 to its namesake, Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr. of the United States Supreme Court.

Upon making the announcement, American Inns of Court President Sherman L. Cohn declared, "Justice Brennan's lifelong commitment to the principles of professionalism and ethics epitomizes the purpose of this award. He is an outstanding role model for law students and young attorneys today. We can all learn from Justice Brennan's example and service."

Justice William J. Brennan, Jr. earned his B.S. from the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business. He earned his law degree from Harvard University. Justice Brennan served with distinction in the United States Army, retiring with the rank of Colonel in 1945. He was awarded the Legion of Merit for his distinguished service.

1725 Duke Street, Suite 630, Alexandria, Virginia 22314 (703) 684-3590
Telefax: (703) 684-3607

Justice Brennan has served the legal profession with distinction from both the bench and the bar. He became a partner in Pitney, Hardin, Ward and Brennan in 1945. He first ascended to the bench in 1949 to the New Jersey Superior Court. Three years later, New Jersey Governor Driscoll appointed him an Associate Justice of the New Jersey Supreme Court. On October 15, 1956, President Dwight D. Eisenhower appointed him an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, where he served with distinction until 1990, when he stepped down to retire.

The American Inns of Court are dedicated to excellence, civility, professionalism and ethics in the legal profession. The movement currently consists of over 12,000 members in 203 Inns (chapters) across 45 states and the District of Columbia.

The Lewis F. Powell, Jr. Award will be conferred upon Justice Brennan on Friday, June 11, 1993 at the Ninth Annual Meeting of the American Inns of Court in Chicago, Illinois. The Lewis F. Powell, Jr. Award for Professionalism and Ethics is made possible through the generous support of WEST Publishing Company.

As you must have gathered, Rebecca is working on a most difficult and important opinion assigned to us, spending a great number of hours here at the Court. Her work is terrific, and she seems to put up with me.

Dear Sandra:

I cannot tell you how much I appreciate your interest in the possibility of having Lewis III put on the Board of Trustees of Colonial Williamsburg.

My understanding is that Joe Carter and Justin Moore have reached retirement age not only at Hunton & Williams but also under the present bylaws of Colonial Williamsburg.

My connection with CW dates back to the mid-1950's when Kenneth Chorley (staff of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.) invited me to become a Trustee of CW and its counsel. I served in these capacities (and usually on its Executive Committee) until I reached and passed retirement age.

I add a few words about Lewis III. He also has had an interesting career and is now 40 years of age. He went to college at Washington and Lee University. He attended Law School at U.Va. where he was Executive Editor of the Law Review, and a member of the Raven Society. He is now a partner at Hunton & Williams.

I say again how much I appreciate your thoughtful interest.

Dear Bryon,

My understanding is that you have today moved your chambers to the new federal building where you have the choice of the judicial chambers there. You certainly deserve to have the best.

Your career has been distinguished and - I believe - without precedent. You will be the subject of several biographies. During your 32 years on the Court I also am confident that you wrote more decisions of the Court than any other Justice. My guess is that you and I may have agreed more frequently than any other two Justices.

Your career prior to coming on the Court is one that merits a biography itself. I am thinking, of course, of World War II. Admiral Arleigh Burke told me of the lives you saved while serving on an aircraft carrier during the sea battle off of Okinawa.

Perhaps you prefer to think of your civilian career - professional football player, Rhodes Scholar, Yale graduate. I hope you plan to sit on Courts of Appeals and to visit law schools. You will be warmly welcomed.

I know that Jo would join me in sending our admiration and affection to Marion and you.

As ever,

Justice White

Dear David:

The comment about you in a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal was no credit to that publication. It was a "cheap shot".

I have a high opinion of you personally, and in my view you are an outstanding addition to the Court.

When we return in the fall please give me the pleasure of taking you to the Monocle.

As ever,

CHAMBERS OF
JUSTICE DAVID H. SOUTER

July 16, 1993
Concord, New Hampshire

Dear Lewis:

Thanks for your kind note of the 7th. I didn't see the Wall Street Journal piece, but I understand it reflects the dissatisfaction of the far right with some opinions of mine that do not comport with the politics of the far right. That reaction is apparently what I get for thinking that you came out the sensible way in a few cases that I would have continued to follow. I remain content to follow you and take whatever the reaction may be.

I hope you and Jo are having, or will soon be starting, a restful and irresponsible summer in Richmond. I am relishing irresponsibility up here.

Yours sincerely,

Justice Powell

Dear Lewis,

I have your very nice letter and appreciate it very much. I have always valued our friendship and will see you in September when we return to Washington.

Marion sends her best wishes to you and Jo, as I do.

Cheers,

Date: August 4, 1993
Re: Swearing in of New Justice

explain
Current plans call for the Chief Justice to administer the judicial oath privately to Judge Ginsburg on Tuesday, August 10 at around 1:30 p.m. This will be followed by a White House ceremony where the Chief Justice will administer the constitutional oath to Judge Ginsburg at 2:30 p.m. White House ceremony at Court

That ceremony will take place in the East Room and transportation will be provided for those wishing to attend. My Secretary has taken a preliminary poll to see who might be in town and she will check back with your chambers later this week to get definite plans from all of you. I expect that a motorcade would leave the Court around 2:00 p.m. and return about one hour later.

We have tentatively set aside the morning of October 1 as the date for a formal investiture. This date seems as good of a date as any for all concerned, but please advise me if it presents any problems for you. As before, we would plan to have a special sitting of the Court commencing at 10:00 a.m., followed by a reception.

As you requested, I notified the Chief's chambers and informed them that you would be in Richmond with your family until Labor Day and so would not be attending Tuesday's events.

Dear Ruth,

I was happy to read that you were confirmed by almost an unanimous vote of the Senate. Jo and I were in our Richmond home, and we do not expect to return to Washington and the Court until after Labor Day.

I hope that you take the Chambers of Byron White as they are next to my Chambers. Even though my status is that of "retired", I am of course interested in and try to keep abreast of the work of the Court.

As I have said before, do not hesitate to call on me when you think I may be helpful.

Sincerely,

Honorable Ruth Bader Ginsburg

Dear Cissy,

Jo and I were happy to see the story in the Richmond Times-Dispatch of August 3 stating that your son John, who has served with the Virginia State Police for some time, recently was promoted. He was given a new assignment that includes Fairfax County and a part of Alexandria. I know you are glad to have him in the area.

I enclose a copy of the story.

With love,

Mrs. Thurgood Marshall

Another Marshall

Same name. Same goal. Just a different approach.

The late Thurgood Marshall interpreted it. His son, John W. Marshall, is enforcing it.

Virginia State Police Sgt. Marshall, son of the late Supreme Court Justice, is busy distinguishing himself in the enforcement arm of government.

Sgt. Marshall recently received a post baccalaureate certificate in criminal justice administration. The five-course program is offered through Virginia Commonwealth University to anyone interested or involved in law enforcement, corrections or the courts.

Sgt. Marshall's assignment covers Fairfax County and part of Alexandria.

Dear Lewis:

I wish I could be your neighbor, but I'm told Clarence will be moving to the Chambers of Byron White. The next best for me seems the second floor Chambers of Thurgood Marshall, and I hope to be there on your return to D.C. and the Court.

RETIRED

August 16, 1993

TO: Law Clerks of Justice Kennedy

This is to thank you warmly for your August 10 letter inviting me to join you for lunch at a convenient time. Perhaps you know that Mrs. Powell and I have a home in Richmond, Virginia, and we are here for most of the summer. I have Chambers at the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals and a highly competent secretary.

When I return to the Court in early September I will have my Clerk, Deanne Maynard, get in touch with you as to a time and place for accepting your invitation.

Sincerely,

Dear Lewis:

I am in Rochester, Minnesota. Doctor Barrett of the Section of Urology spoke of you and asked how you were. He said that if you ever needed him he would catch a plane to Washington to see you so as to avoid your coming to the Midwest. This speaks highly of his regard for you.

Sincerely,

Dear Marion and Byron,

Jo and I were happy to be at the same table with you and Marion at the ACTL party Tuesday evening. We thought the evening was pleasant.

We also hope that you will use your new "home" here in Washington frequently, and that we can dine together from time to time.

With admiration and affection.

Dear Harry:

It came to my attention this morning that I did not acknowledge and thank you for your letter of September 1.

Dave Barrett continues to be a friend. I keep in touch with him through his former associate Jim Regan who is a urologist at Georgetown Hospital. I have a checkup by Jim every six months.

I admire the way you continue to serve as an active Justice. You and I were usually together with I also was active.

I know that Jo would join me in sending love to Dottie and your daughter Sally.

Dear Sandra and John,

Jo and I cannot recall having a more interesting evening than your dinner here at the Court on Monday.

The second floor dining room is an elegant place for a formal dinner. John gave one of his humorous talks, and Sandra graciously welcomed all of us. The group of "rap" singers was a unique addition to the evening. All of us liked it!

The dinner gave us an opportunity to see Ruth Bader Ginsburg and her husband Marty. He was at our table, and will be another fine addition to our family of Justices and spouses.

Jo joins me in sending thanks for a memorable evening.

Dear Cissy,

You and your sons had every reason to be happy about the award given to Thurgood Marshall posthumously. The Medal of Freedom is one of the highest honors awarded in our country. I have said many times that Thurgood fully deserves this recognition.

I enclose a copy of my letter of his date to the President.
